

THE GREAT MANGO HEIST

It was the hottest day of summer, and the mango trees in Master Kallu's orchard were bursting with golden, juicy fruit.

Every animal in the jungle wanted them—but the farmer was fierce.

Anyone who dared come close got chased with stones and sticks.

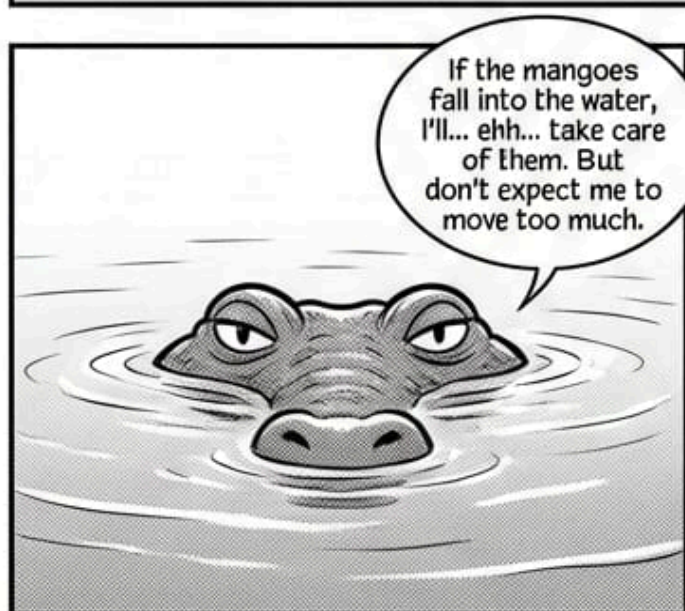

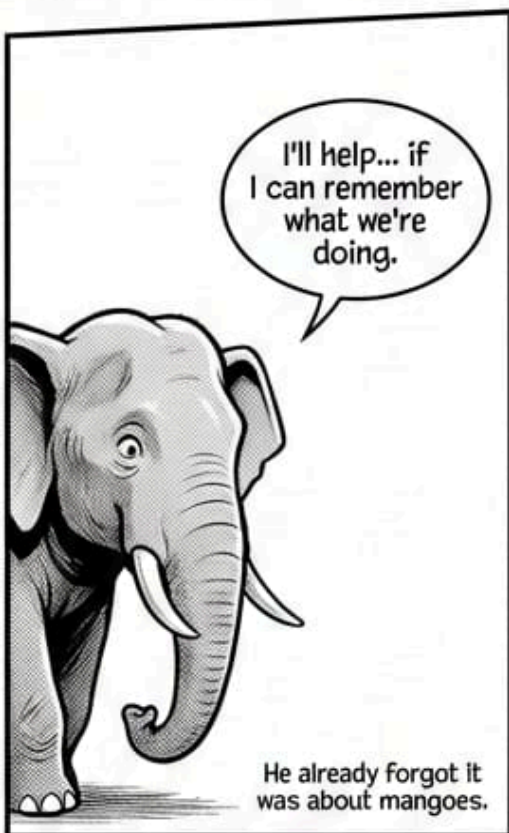

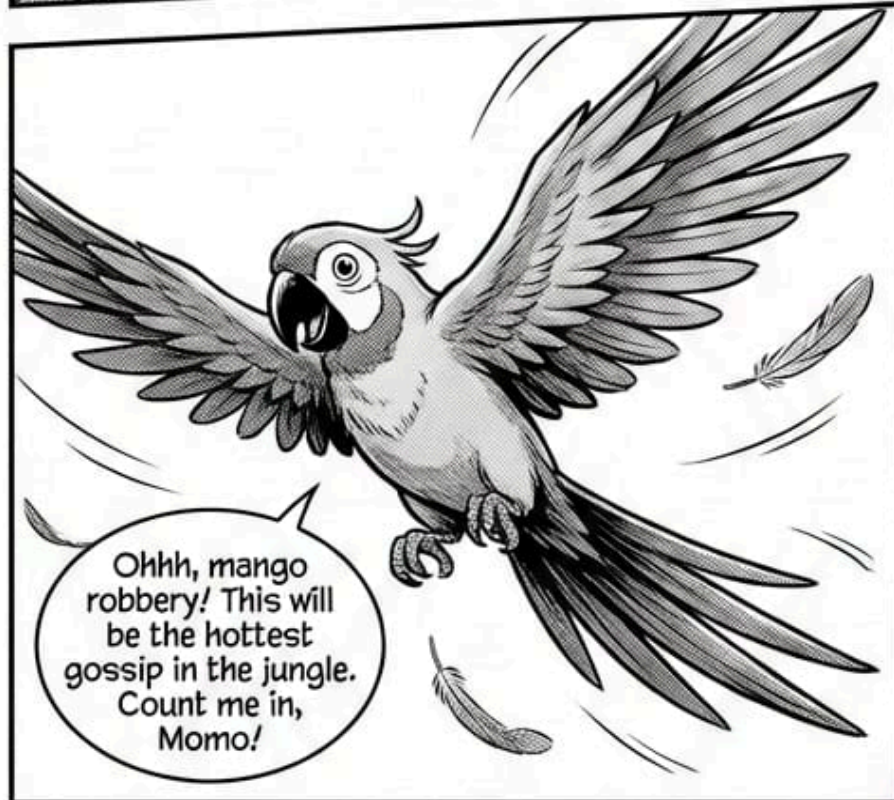

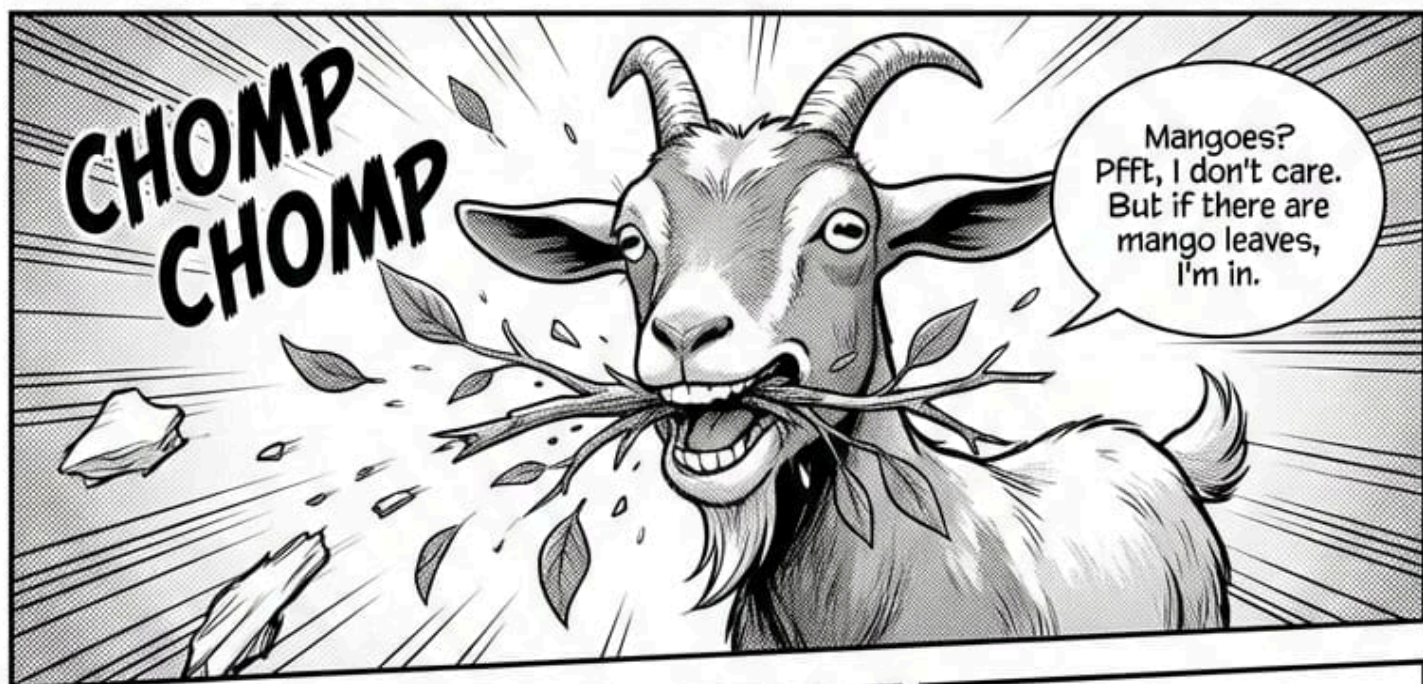

Ahh, those mangoes are calling my name! But that farmer guards them like treasure.

I need a team...
a clever team.

Chikki would distract the farmer by imitating his wife's voice.

Bunty would chew through the wooden fence.

Momo would climb and shake the mango tree.

Dholu would scoop up the fallen mangoes.

Kalu would guard the river.

FOOLPROOF!

and blew half the
mangoes into the river.

SFX:

ACHOOO!

SPLOSH!

SFX:

"Best plan ever...
for me!" he hummed.

A parrot
gossiping loudly
to other parrots:
"Mango robbery in progress! Come watch!"

A monkey
swinging
upside down
in a hammock,
screaming.

HAHAHA! HAHHA HAHHA

A goat
hiccupping and burping out
wood chips.

HIC! BURP!

ACHOO!

SFX:
An elephant
sneezing mango
juice like a fountain.

Arrey wah!
Better than any circus!
I should start charging tickets!

A crocodile
drifting lazily,
belly full, singing,
"La la la, mangoes
are sweet."

The animals regrouped, sticky with mango juice but still empty-handed.

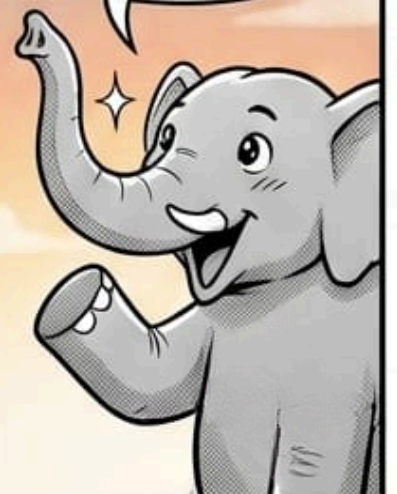

Next time, we raid a banana farm. No fences. No rivers. Simple!

NEVER AGAIN, MOMO!

Yes! This time I will be prepared well!

And so, the Great Mango Heist ended... with only one winner: the lazy crocodile.

