

SANKRANTHI

A Thank You to Nature

A festival of harvest, gratitude, and togetherness.

When the Sun changes its path, a festival is born.

This moment is called Sankranthi.

It brings warmth... after long cold days.

I have watched this sunrise since childhood.

And every year, it feels new.

Sankranthi marks the Sun's northward journey.

It usually arrives in mid-January.

For farmers, this is harvest time.

Months of effort turn into food.

We bow to the land.

Because it feeds us all.

Sankranthi belongs to farmers.

And to those who work beside them.

Every home fills with hope.

Every home fills with hope.

Laughter returns to the village.

This joy is earned.

And the festival begins...

...with Bhogi.

Bhogi is about letting go.

We burn the old...

...to welcome the new.

A fresh beginning for the soul.

Homes shine with care.

Every line invites prosperity.

Food made from new rice.

We thank the Sun.

Sweet words replace bitter ones.

Happiness is shared.

'Kanuma honors our animals.'

'They help us survive.'

The village comes alive.

Gratitude has no words.

Only respect.

Sankranthi colors the sky.

Dreams rise upward.

Joy fills the air.

Even worries fly away.

Freedom feels light.

Freedom life feels light.

Just like our hearts.

Just like our hearts.

Sankranthi teaches gratitude.

Every role matters.

Happiness comes from respect.

A lesson beyond a festival.

Sankranthi fills the skies with joy.

Laughter echoes from every rooftop.

We share sweetness and good wishes.

A new season of hope begins.

The sun brings new life. Happy
Sankranti!

“Celebrating harvest. Celebrating life.”
